What do other cultures do?Student A*Free Time in Brazil

Television is very popular in Brazil, but the hot weather makes city apartments uncomfortable and most leisure activities take place outdoors. Most Brazilians live near the coast. The praia, or beach, is the favourite place for people to spend their free time.

Football (US soccer) is the most popular sport and Brazilians take it very seriously. Since the World Cup started, Brazil has reached the final stages every time and has won the championship five times, in 1958, 1962, 1970, 1994 and 2002. The Brazilians play football everywhere. They play on the beach, in the streets, and anywhere where there is room to kick a ball around.

Brazilians are famous for their love of singing and dancing and samba is their national music. During Carnival time there is samba music day and night, and the streets become huge outdoor dance floors.

Student BFree Time in Sweden

Swedes have plenty of free time because the hours of work are short and holidays are long. After work many people relax with a newspaper or magazine. The Swedes are among the biggest newspaper readers in the world. Watching television is also a favourite way of relaxing.

Many Swedes go to evening classes to learn a foreign language for their holidays abroad or to practise some handicraft. Another favourite pastime is entertaining at home. Most people prefer to meet friends in their own homes as restaurants are usually very expensive.

The winters are very long in Sweden, so there is plenty of opportunity for winter sports. Skiing is very popular, especially cross-country skiing. The Swedes like football (US soccer) but they only play it summer. In winter they play ice hockey. The Swedish national ice hockey team is one of the best in the world.
